St. Thomas Church is the largest structure in Bishops Head and is more impressive than Zion United Methodist Church for its size, the detail, however, is not as refined.

The building is six bays deep and on its northwest gable is a series of four windows, all equal in size and each having the popular miter arch. The walls are covered with weatherboard. A tower rises within the north corner with the entrance on the northeast side. Imbricated shingles cover the tower and gable, as well as the small gable on the side from which issus the brick chimney. The tower extends to a cornice almost even with the apex of the main roof. Above, there is a swallow tail portion of roof extending to the slightly narrower shingled bellfry which has double louvers therein. Above the bellfry is another cornice with brackets and a truncated pyramid roof. Perhaps there was originally a spire or gallery on top, but it looks incomplete in its present condition.
